

JOSEPH WILLIAMS – Writer Profile

Joseph Williams is a 31-year-old writer from Auckland, working full time as a Business Analyst.

I studied English, Logic and Computation a decade ago. Writing has been my passion since I was young, but it wasn't until I'd settled into a career before I realised I wanted to pursue it further.

Most of my writing has been published in obscure online publications, though one short story was published in Takahe magazine. I'm truly grateful to have won this competition against such a number of excellent entries and am inspired to keep writing.

The story was inspired by a news article I read about a shark attack victim, though it went elsewhere from there. I submitted it the day before my daughter was born.

I am currently working on a novel and will continue to write short fiction. I sincerely hope people will want to read it!
